High-Poverty Census Tracts

- The following maps show high-poverty neighborhoods in selected metropolitan areas based on the U.S. Census in 2000 and the American Community Survey 5-Year File for 2009-2013.
- The maps are zoomed in on the central cities and inner-ring suburbs to better show the high-poverty neighborhoods.
- High-poverty neighborhoods are defined as census tracts with a poverty of 40 percent or more.
- See Appendix A and B for further details on the methodology and data.
